Welcome to Ibiza – the island of light, rhythm, and transformation.

Before the first airport opened in 1966, Ibiza could only be reached by boat – a remote, sun-drenched haven in the Mediterranean. Travelers arrived at the old harbor, where white-washed houses spilled down from the ancient citadel of Dalt Vila and a vibrant mix of wanderers, artists, and outsiders waited onshore, hoping for letters or money from home. Even then, the island exuded a mysterious energy – a blend of Mediterranean ease and almost mythic allure. Countless poets have tried to capture the magic light that bathes Ibiza at dusk, but words often fall short. This is more than a place – it's a feeling, a state of mind.

Today, Ibiza is more alive than ever. The clubs pulse through the night, the beaches glow in the sun, and every corner seems to vibrate with possibility. It's the undisputed capital of electronic music, drawing dancers, DJs, and dreamers from around the world. From the iconic venues of Hï Ibiza, Ushuaïa Ibiza, and Pacha to the raw magic of DC10 and Amnesia – nights here stretch into sunrise, soundtracked by legends like Solomun, Black Coffee, David Guetta, and many more. A new chapter begins this season with [UNVRS], the brand-new club by The Night League, setting new standards in sound, design, and experience and hosting the spectacular comeback of Carl Cox to the island. Beyond the big names, places like Akasha in the island's tranquil north are gaining more and more momentum. Known for its intimate atmosphere and loyal local crowd, the club runs all year round – a rarity on the island, with Sven Väth holding a celebrated residency there. All in all, this season is shaping up to be one of the most exciting ever for this iconic island.

We at FAZE Magazine are proud to present the third edition of our Ibiza guide in partnership with IMS – your trusted companion through the island's most exciting places and people. Whether you're dancing until dawn, discovering secret beaches, or sipping cocktails beneath the stars, we've gathered the best Ibiza has to offer: the top clubs and residencies, the finest beaches, restaurants, hotels, and unforgettable experiences.

Let the island lead you – and may its rhythm stay with you long after the music fades.

Hasta luego,

INTERNATIONAL MUSIC SUMMIT 2025

Each year, as Ibiza stretches into its summer rhythm, the International Music Summit sets the tone — not just for the island's club season, but for the global conversation around electronic music. And while IMS has long stood at the intersection of culture, community and commerce, this year's edition feels more like a reflection of where the scene truly is in 2025: in a moment of transition, complexity, and promise.

The theme guiding this year's summit - Intergenerational Exchange - doesn't just look back across four decades of electronic music history, but actively reaches between generations to ask what wisdom, values, and cultural insights can and should be carried forward. In a scene often driven by novelty and reinvention, IMS 2025 is asking something more thoughtful: what can the old school and the next gen learn from each other?

It's a question that flows through nearly every element of this year's programme. From the deep dive into Drum 'n' Bass and Jungle, tracking its evolution from underground resistance to global force, to roundtables on the future of nightlife and radio, IMS takes a deliberately wide-angle view of legacy and innovation. The idea isn't to dwell in nostalgia, but to uncover the connective tissue — the shared ideas and values that survive across time, even as the music, the technology, and the business models change.

Nowhere is that more evident than in sessions like "The Future of Global Nightlife", where the industry's cultural and economic challenges come into sharp focus. Or in "The Silent Epidemic", a conversation around hearing loss and health that breaks long-standing taboos and pushes for care and sustainability — not just in sound systems, but in people. Elsewhere, topics like label disruption, representation, and cultural exchange with Africa's electronic scenes paint a nuanced picture of an industry still in flux.

But this year's summit is not just about confronting tension or bridging gaps. It's also about joy — in collaboration, in curiosity, and in shared experience. Sessions like Mentor Matchmaking spark intergenerational conversations with real-life impact, while panels like "Supporting the Underdogs" celebrate those reshaping the landscape from the margins. At every turn, the summit creates space for different voices — not to speak over one another, but to listen, respond, and move together.

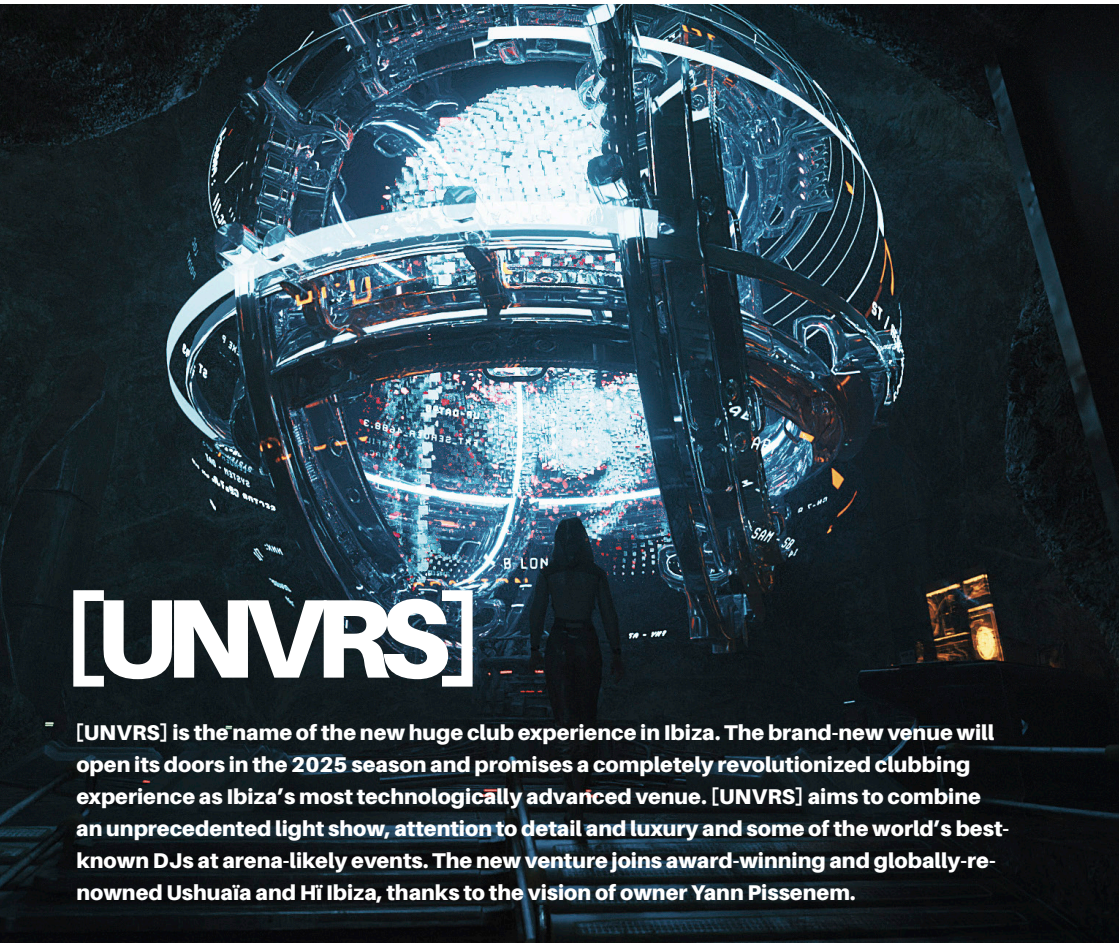

That spirit extends all the way to IMS Dalt Vila, the summit's signature closing celebration, where emerging and established artists share the stage in one of the most symbolic spaces on the island. This year's lineup embodies the theme with intent: from legends like Paco Osuna to breakthrough acts like Girls Don't Sync, from the global resonance of Major League DJz to the genre-defying vision of TSHA. It's not just a party — it's a statement.

And that's what this edition of IMS ultimately offers: not just a place to talk about change, but a space to embody it. At a time when much of the music industry is still figuring out how to move forward — socially, technologically, economically — IMS Ibiza 2025 makes a powerful case for the idea that progress doesn't have to mean disconnection. That experience and innovation are not opposites. That the past and future of electronic music might just move best in rhythm, together.

"T.R.A.N.C.E." returns to the core values of techno and electronic music, such as positive energy, transformative sounds with rhythm, and the ritual of togetherness and unity, all leading to the euphoric feeling described.

COCOON AT AMNESIA

SUNDAY, 18 MAY

A really special date: Fans' wishes are heard - Sven Väth's techno brand Cocoon returns to Amnesia Ibiza for a special one-night event after a long absence.

On Sunday, May 18th, this one-time event brings back an old Ibiza tradition, as Cocoon at Amnesia was one of the most popular event series on the White Island over the years. Some would even say it was the best techno party in the world at its peak.

It's been a while since Cocoon first took over Amnesia back in 1999. Thanks to the German legend Sven Väth, who had a unique vision with personality and visual creativity at the forefront, Cocoon at Amnesia became one for the books, creating some of the most magnificent, legendary techno moments on the island.

World-class electronic music DJs such as Ricardo Villalobos, Richie Hawtin, Luciano, Adam Beyer, Nina Kraviz, Carl Craig, and Loco Dice were invited, alongside the most passionate visitors in the world.

Legendary were the afterparties of Cocoon after Amnesia, such as the 4,500-visitor afterparty in Talamanca back in 2004, where the party continued because the police feared the road would collapse when breaking up the event.

Cocoon is not only legendary in Ibiza; it is one of the longest-running, most popular, and best-known real techno brands in the game, still remaining underground despite its popularity. Still touring around the world, Cocoon remains one of the most remarkable experiences for not just one generation of techno clubbers.

For the one-night magic comeback of Cocoon in its old home, it will create an unforgettable new vibe with a long history. The brand has always been forward-thinking since 1999. This is the next chapter. History is made again on this date.

Headliners will be Sven Väth and Richie Hawtin. The rest of the lineup will be announced shortly before the event.

Sven Väth – 4 Decades Behind the Decks: A Journey of Music, Magic and Euphoria

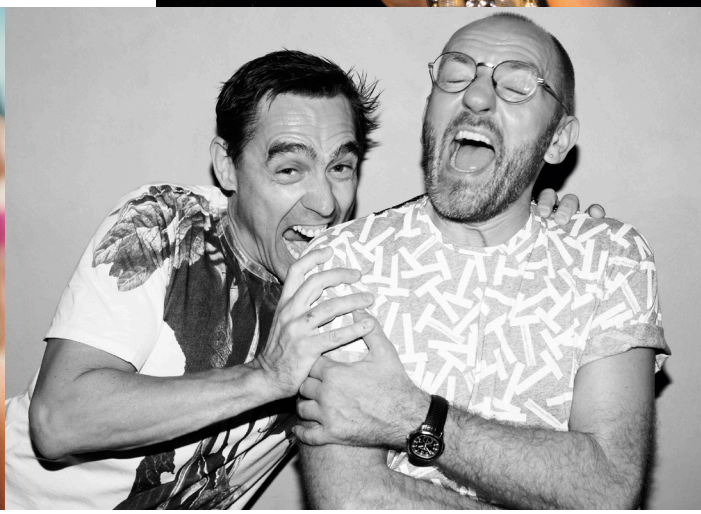

40 years on 344 pages: But it could easily have been 1,000 pages - and the story hasn't even been told yet. Sven Väth, who was born in Offenbach in 1964 and grew up in Obertshausen, not only celebrated his 60th birthday in 2024, but also his 40th anniversary as a DJ: 40 years behind the turntables with the mission of bringing people together and connecting them with music. And Sven Väth has now packed the essence of these four decades into a photo book. With - exactly - a lot of photos, but also with many personal memories and anecdotes, not only from himself, but also from numerous friends, companions and his family.

'4 Decades Behind the Decks: A Journey of Music, Magic, and Euphoria' is a very intense and detailed work that allows us to participate in this extraordinary journey through life - a fascinating retrospective, but only a snapshot, because of course it goes on.

COCOON

"IT'S ME. IT'S CARL COX."

There are legends, and then there's Carl Cox. For over 22 unforgettable years, his residency at Space wasn't just a party – it was a cultural movement, a heartbeat of Ibiza's golden era. When the iconic club closed its doors in 2016, it marked the end of an era not just for Cox, but for the island itself. Now, after nearly a decade away, he returns – not for a cameo, but to write a brand-new chapter with a Sunday residency at [UNVRS], a bold new venue aiming to redefine Ibiza's nightlife. In this exclusive interview, Carl reflects on his deep-rooted bond with the island, the legacy of Space, and the emotions behind this long-awaited comeback. With fire in his soul and fresh music in his bag, the king is back – not to relive the past, but to shape the future.

Your return to Ibiza with a residency at [UNVRS] feels like a major moment, not only for the island but for the scene in general. What makes this residency special to you, and how might it differ from the legendary last one on the island?

Well, the thing about Space was that I was there for over 22 years. And it was really humble beginnings – it was the first opportunity I had to create something of my own on the island. I learned so much over those years about how to be part of the society of the island, what Ibiza is truly about. And of course, you can imagine the amount of music played, artists supported, DJs booked, dancers entertained, concepts created over that time. And I'm basically going to take everything that I've learned over those years and redirect it to this new residency. It will be a continuation of the legacy – from what we created at Space, to now the next chapter with [UNVRS]. I'm very excited about that transition, not just for myself, but as something to build for the future of the island. I think a lot of people will be very excited by that.

You've described this as more than just a comeback, but a reunion with Ibiza. What is it about the island that continues to inspire and challenge you after all these years?

My first experience going to the island was in 1985, and a lot of people at that time from the UK were going to Magaluf. But Ibiza was always the place which had the best clubs, the best sound system, the best setups. So for me, being a DJ who was very curious about the best sound systems, I kind of gravitated to the island. When I first got there, I was very, very young, and I didn't have a lot of money. I stayed in San Antonio and I didn't play or DJ because nobody really knew who I was. A lot of the clubs were owned and run by Spanish people and the DJs were Spanish. So it was kind of nice to be able to go there and to enjoy their culture, their way. But there was interest in having the UK promoters and DJs come over and take over certain places – say, Café del Mar in the early days. There were the local Spanish people going there for sunsets, but then if you put English promoters and DJs in there, a lot of the UK holidaymakers would gravitate to it. So I was there to see all of that kind of development as well. For me, the experience of Ibiza was like nothing else anywhere in the world, and I went every year to Ibiza from 1985 until the present day.

Sundays at [UNVRS] are set to redefine nightlife on the island. What kind of experience do you want clubbers to take away?
When I go back to the island, when I start this new chapter at [UNVRS], it's all about owning that Sunday. It's the whole night, the journey, the ethos, the whole idea of why this club culture exists on the island – what makes it so special for so many people.

CARL COX

Music is the glue that keeps it all together. With my night, the expectations of that just come straight from the heart, come straight from me – what I've missed for so long. I've got a lot of catching up to do. I've got a lot of music that I want to share with people. Expect the unexpected, always. And I just want people to walk away having the best experience they can ever have in any club on that island. It's me. It's Carl Cox at [UNVRS]. There's no fancy name. There's no marketing idea. We're not selling tickets on a concept. It literally is a guy – me – and a brand new club on the island on Sundays. And if anyone knows me, they know that I always bring the party – whether I'm playing house music, techno, electronica, funk, soul or drum and bass. I've always tried to play the best of all genres of music. I've always tried to give people my soul, my idea of what I believe should be played. And I've always supported DJs and given them carte blanche on whatever they choose to play on the dance floor. There should be no boundaries or limits to where we can go with this musically. I want people to walk away and go, "I didn't expect that." That's what I would like to leave as a legacy – giving people the unexpected. There are certain nights when you're able to get exactly what you want because you know what you're going for. But my night has always been based on vibe, energy and allowing the people to be themselves.

Ibiza has evolved a lot over the years. How do you think [UNVRS] will deliver as a club and is there any new frontier you'd like to explore with the new residency?

I want to try to introduce more live electronic performances to the night. We don't know what it looks like at the moment. We will tinge on it at some point. When I was playing at Space back in the day, we never really had too many live performances. We tried to do that. I still think people weren't really too ready at that particular time for it. But I think they could be ready for it now. So let me just DJ first. Let me get comfortable with what the night looks like and what it feels like. And then we'll start to bring in these new live electronic artists, because there are a lot of them from all over the world making some great music. Conceptually, you'll find new artists emerging because of that, and new sounds emerging because of that. And people are to be excited by that – to see more, not just DJ performances, but live electronic performances. There are a million DJs these days, so it'd be nice to see me try and develop that live performance aspect for the club in the future. Ibiza has always been a hotbed of excitement for what the club can basically give you. And, you know, when you're involved in something like this, the idea is to have the ability to work within the management of the club as well – to all work together as one, to move things forward for the punter, for the person that goes there to expect something from the club itself. Because even though the night is about me, it's actually about the club. A lot is going on in that club. When you go through the door and you get to experience all other aspects of what that club can give you. The way [UNVRS] has been designed, everything is centred on your experience and enjoyment of that club. I'm just a backdrop to what that club is about.

What kind of emotions are you feeling now, looking ahead to the return?

My return will be a very emotional comeback after being away for so long. If you can imagine not being in Space Ibiza since 2016 and then coming back to [UNVRS] in 2025 – that's a huge gap of not being able to do what I love to do on the island. People will always remember my time at Space, and it is important to me that we did leave a legacy, but for me it's in the past now. To be able to put that behind us and move forward is very exciting. This is a new beginning for me. I feel like a kid with a new toy. I feel like this is my first pushbike that my dad gave me. We're turning a corner, we're making something exciting again – creating a new legacy for the next generation, the next 10 or 15 years. I feel very humbled by the opportunity. I never thought that I'd be able to go back and do what I love to do on this island again. I'm obviously very excited about it. But it's a very serious thing as well. You know, from a musical point of view, I've got a lot to say in the music that I create and perform and share with people. And support new up-and-coming artists who are coming through the fold like I used to do back in the day.
